

Peer Review I

1. What is your general research question?

What are the most common English language units young people use to perform a simplistic description about themselves?

2. Why do you think this question is interesting? What does an answer to it tell us?

In my opinion, this is an interesting question because, in situations where I have to present myself superficially but truthfully, I find it complex to summarize my whole being into a few words. If the answer to this inquiry was a collection of generalized adjectives, it would show that the participants are not familiar with the capacity of forming an accurate and potent short description about themselves. I believe that knowing how to outline your most relevant characteristics is a useful skill.

3. What is your specific research question?

What are the 3 most repeated words found in the answers of 100 Fashion Design first year students of University of Arts of London and 100 Chemistry first year students of University of Leeds when they were privately and individually asked to describe themselves in 3 words?

5. What kind of data are you planning to use to address Question 2 within the scope of this class?

Nominal and metric data from a complete sample.

• How will you obtain it?

I will make them up through suppositions of answers distributions.

• How much will you collect?

All of it.

• Do you think that is enough data to address Question 2? Why (not)?

Yes.
